

The first top left photo represents immigration because my family has walked from Mexico and other countries to get to America. My uncle also came to America by boat in the late 70s to early 80s and almost died. The photo on the top right presents immigration to me because living in a multigenerational, multifamily home is something very common for me. At one point in my life I used to live in a house with 7 other people. My mom, dad, sister, aunt, uncle, and two younger cousins once lived in a three bedroom, one and a half bathroom house. Though it was very cramped I still was happy with my family and spent and enjoy my time with my cousins. The bottom left photo represents immigration to me because it shows Little Haiti, in Miami Florida, and how Haitian like many other groups form easily identifiable communities in the United States. The bottom right photo represents immigration to me because it shows how immigrants and descendants of immigrants in America can all come together and celebrate their culture while far from home.
